Introduction

Uttar Pradesh is a prominent producer of a wide variety of crops, and is commonly known as the “Granary of the nation”. The state’s food grain production has increased from around 43 million tonnes in 2001 to and 59.4 million tonnes in 2018-19. The State contributes more than 20% of total food grain production of country. The largest source of growth in agriculture is the livestock sector, followed by sugar, forestry, cereals, fruit and vegetables and fisheries. The livestock sector has contributed nearly 39.4% to growth in agriculture value in UP between 2000-01 and 2013-14. Among crops, sugarcane has contributed 14%, forestry 11%, cereals 10% and fruits and vegetables 8% to the growth of agriculture in UP similarly Uttar Pradesh, is widely acknowledged for its natural resources and variety of geographical topography.

The state is well established for the export of rice, mangoes, vegetables and potatoes. In addition to all strength in agricultural sector, there is an urgent need to develop cost effective measures to enhance the income of the farmers. Simultaneously, development of new technologies in various sectors has also become urgency along with proper implementation of already available technologies. Thus, technological as well as policy interventions both need to be redefined and befitting. In above context 5th U. P. Agricultural Science Congress on “Enhancing Farmer’s Income and Water Conservation: Opportunities and Challenges” is proposed to be organized with following themes:
